Dedicated to Jack

A book by Brian Cairnduff and Philip Burns

Mummy Giant and Daddy Giant are in bed all fast asleep Jack the little giant is bored so he decides to creep

Out the front door into the dark he runs up the hill and skips through the park

Jack and the Clock Tower

The Adventures of Jack the little Giant and the Clock Tower

He goes into the city and sees a high tower
The clock at the top shows it is ten past the hour

Who are you my big friend asks a voice from below

I am Jack the little Giant he replies well, hello

Perhaps you can help me
I am Phil the Fox
Can you please lift that tower,
I can't find my socks

Phil the Fox

Jack lifts up the tower
Well he is very strong Phil laughs and runs off saying
You have done wrong

I just tricked you into breaking that steeple
You will get into trouble with all the town people

Jack is upset, he never meant any harm
He believed that poor Phil needed socks to keep warm

Now he is left with the clock tower he is in a stew
I know who can help me, my friends at the zoo

Jack visits the zoo

So Jack climbs over the wall and into the zoo where he sees Al the Elephant Jack, how are you?

I have broken this tower and I just cannot fix it Please help me out Look I brought you a biscuit

His friend wants to help him but does not know how He scratches his chin and wrinkles his brow

Al the elephant

Jack, this may sound funny but try not to laugh
I think you should go ask
Janine the Giraffe

She is very clever and she is very tall She sees lots of things when she looks over the wall

Janine the Giraffe
is so happy to see Jack But she has no good ideas to put him on track

Janine the Giraffe

You can ask Katy
the nice Kangaroo
She may know something that can help you

Or Helen the Hippo

Or Cameron the Croc

But none of his friends can help Jack fix the clock

Jack's friends at the zoo

So he sits down unhappy because he has been bad
A little voice says
Why do you look so sad?

I broke this clock tower
I just feel like crying
Who are you?
I'm just a little monkey called Brian

I am not very clever your friends are all bright so I do not know if this idea is right

Brian the baby monkey

My Mummy always tells me so I'll tell you Jack If I take what I should not then I must put it back

Brian you are clever Jack jumps to his feet
And takes the tower back to its place in the street

It looks so good there Jack claps with delight Then goes home to his bed and sleeps happily all night

Night night Jack

The End

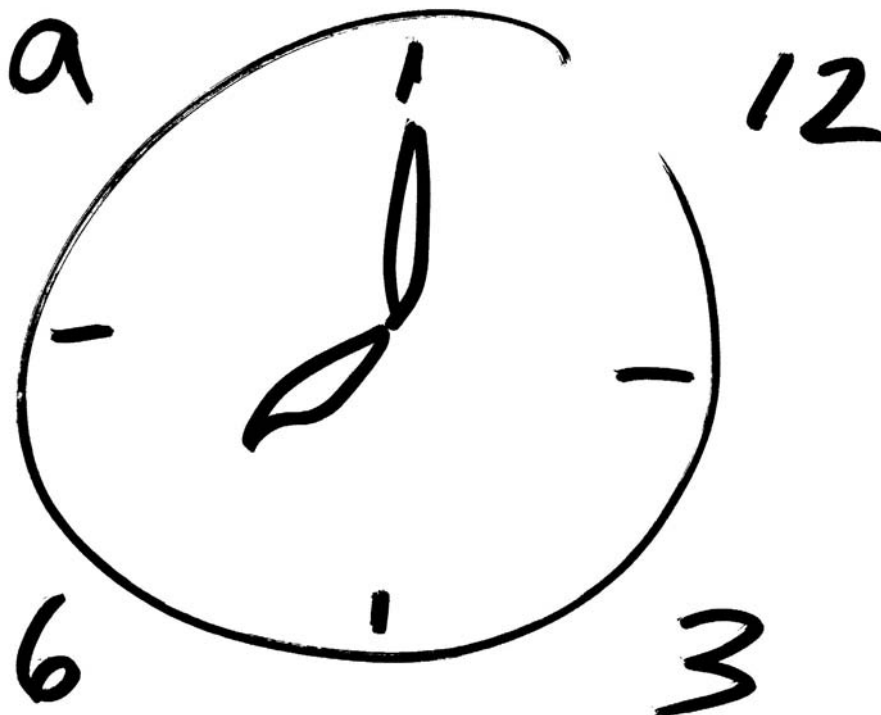

It is the author and artist's wish to bring The Adventures of Jack the little Giant to youngsters in an educational and fun way.

The following pages have simple outline drawings from within the pages of this story and we would love children of all ages to be encouraged to colour or to draw their own characters.

Thank you

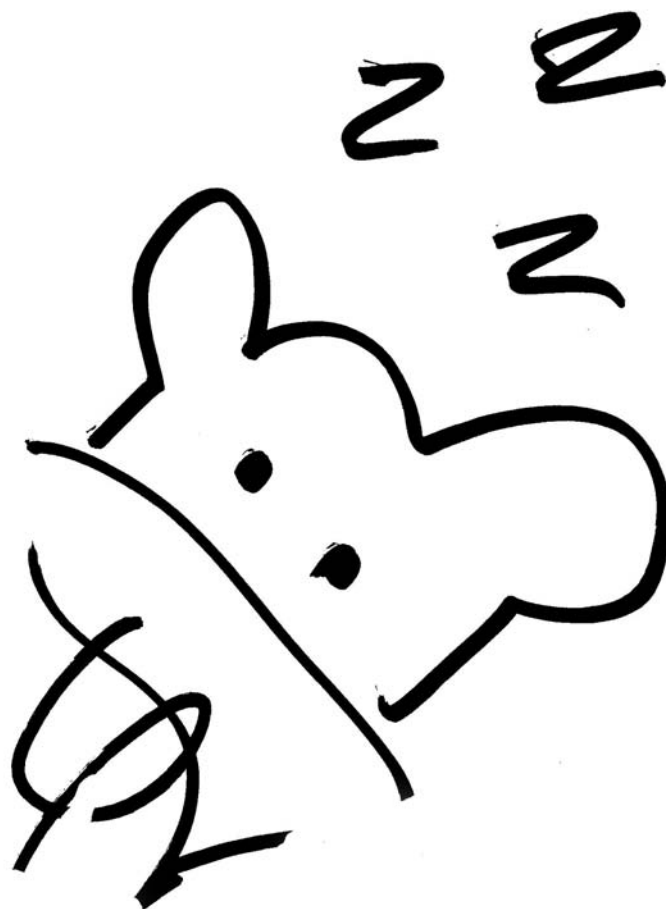

Can you draw Jack in his hat

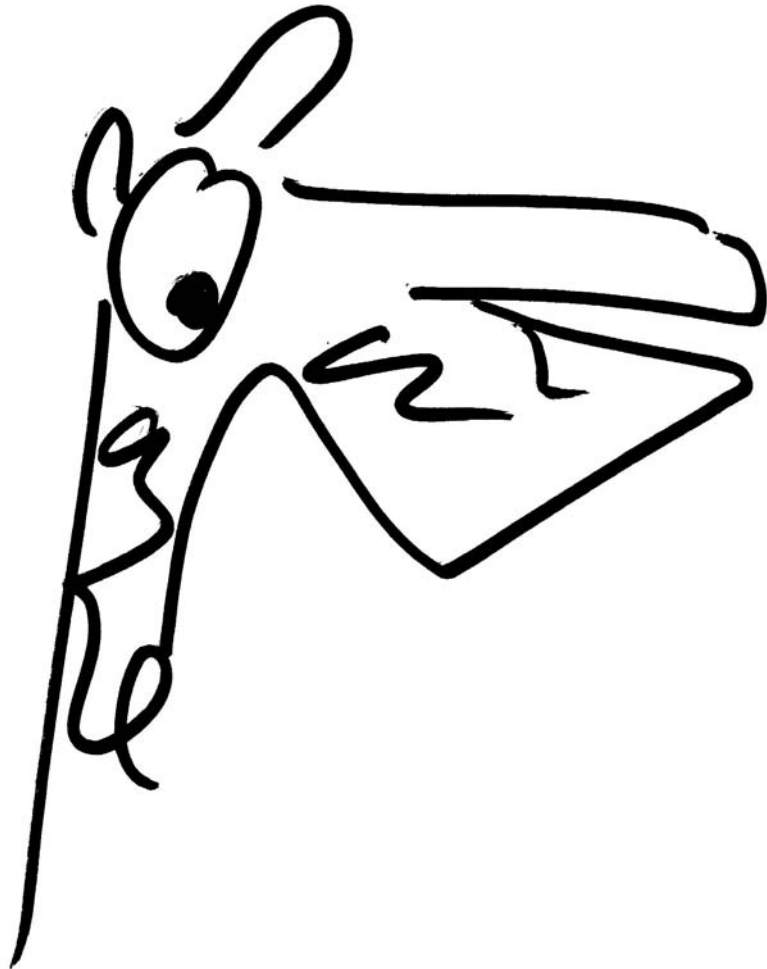

Where do the numbers go

What is in Katy's basket

Where is Big Ted sleeping

What kind of animal is Janine

Helen loves the pool

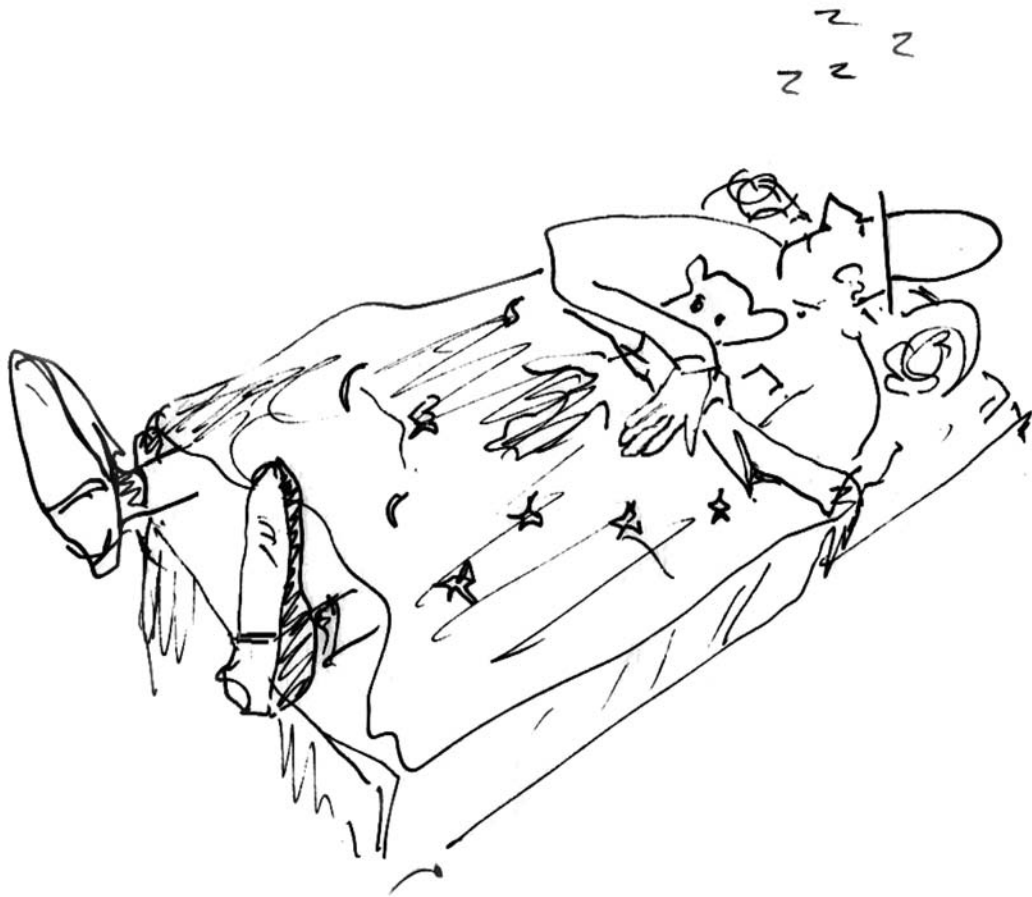

What colour are Jack's shoes

Cameron has a big smile

Al the Elephant needs some colour

Be very quiet, you don't want to wake up Jack!
